

Clearstate – Healthcare Analyst or Senior Analyst

Clearstate, an Economist Intelligence Unit business, offers specialized healthcare market and business intelligence complimented by strategic advisory services to help medical device, pharmaceutical, biotechnology and healthcare service firms understand their current and potential markets, and implement pragmatic and innovative strategies to tap into new growth opportunities.

We are currently seeking a Healthcare Analyst or Senior Analyst who will work with, and lead, other healthcare analysts to deliver single or multi-country projects in the areas of market opportunity assessment, go-to-market strategy, customer / channel / competitive insights and environment scanning. The Analyst / Senior Analyst will also support client management during the course of each engagement, including communicating project updates, presenting key milestones, pre-empting problems and managing different client stakeholders.

Accountabilities:

In this role you will be expected to:

- Support project teams in matters such as solution design, primary research coordination, analysis and creative strategy formulation, reporting and presentations
- Lead team of healthcare analysts and researchers to deliver multi-country projects for healthcare clients in the areas of market opportunity assessment, go-to-market strategy, customer insights, channel optimization strategy and competitive benchmarking
- Liaise with clients during the course of the project engagement, including communicating project updates, presenting key milestones, pre-empting project issues, managing different client stakeholders, etc
- For Senior Analysts: Be responsible for the mentoring and guidance of analysts, ensuring that they meet their performance goals and successfully grow their careers at Clearstate

Experience, skills and professional attributes:

To succeed in the role you must have:

- Bachelor's or Master's (or equivalent) degree ideally related to healthcare or life sciences
- Relevant experience in business research / consulting project execution and management
- Exceptional command of written and spoken English, as well as command of a second European language

You will be able to demonstrate:

- Excellent people skills, with the ability to motivate teams and work well with people at all levels in the organization
- Keen interest in and knowledge of the healthcare sector
- Analytical ability and interest in intellectual challenges
- Versatility, ability to think inside and outside of the box
- Ability to work as part of a fast-paced team
- Willingness to travel

If this role matches your skills, experience and motivations then please submit your CV with a covering note identifying why you feel you would be a great addition to the team along with your salary expectations.

In return, we provide a supportive and progressive environment for you to grow in both a professional and personal capacity as well as offering a wide range of benefits and opportunities.