Student-Led Careers Panel Event

Our LSHTM class represents a diverse student body with a wide range of professional backgrounds. As current students, it's essential that we build our networks and learn from one another's career experiences to set ourselves up for success after graduation.

On Thursday, April 30th at 5:30 PM in the John Snow Lecture Hall, the Careers Project Assistants will be hosting a student-led careers panel and networking event. During the panel, students with previous work experience will share insights from their professional journeys, followed by a Q&A session. This is a great opportunity to hear directly from peers about different career paths across global health and related fields.

After the panel, we'll continue the conversation at an informal networking event at the Pump Handle, a chance to keep building connections with classmates. We look forward to seeing you there and building a stronger, more connected LSHTM community!
