UK: Job Vacancy Websites

This document is designed for students that are seeking employment opportunities across the UK.

Working in the UK

Employment opportunities across the UK are diverse. The UK economy has a large number of international companies with operations in the UK. Service industries form a significant part of the economy, these include financial services (including pension funds, general insurance and banks), retail, tech, engineering, education and healthcare. Roles with marketing, HR and accounting are frequently offered in these businesses.

Roles do vary across the UK, whilst there is a desire amongst many graduates to work in London, many businesses usually have a presence in most large cities and competition for these roles is often less fierce. After Brexit, skills shortages have been reported in sectors such as health & social care, engineering (civil and mechanical) and teaching. Undertaking additional research will help you identify which sectors and roles are in the most demand.

Most applications take the form of a CV, often accompanied with a covering letter (but not always) or frequently via online application forms or recruitment platforms. When applying for jobs the key things to look out for are the typical length of a CV – 1 or 2 pages? Is a cover letter required? Will you need to complete an application form? Using your network to build personal contacts and making speculative applications is fairly common.

If you are not a citizen or a resident of the UK, please check if there are any visa regulations and language requirements. This resource will give you some useful starting points for both general vacancy websites and those that relate to specific industries.
